King Edward and the Blind Man. Apropos of the anecdote of one of the British cabinet ministers leading a blind man across a crowded street, it may be recalled that the late king, when Prince of Wales, once performed the like charitable action for a blind fiddler in Pall Mall. Perceiving that the man was desirous of getting to the other side, the prince, who was about to cross from the Marlborough club to his own residence, quietly took him by the arm and conveyed him safely to the pavement opposite, bestowing a coin before parting with him.

N. Y. DIVORCE TANGLE INVOLVES GOVERNOR

Adele Blood and Gov. Earl Brewer.

The name of Gov. Earl Brewer of Mississippi has become involved in the divorce suit of Adele Blood, actress, against Edward Davis, an actor. After Governor Brewer saw Miss Blood in "Everywoman" at Jackson, Miss., a little more than a year ago, Brewer's confidential agent, Ira Sample, saw Miss Blood's attorney and offered to dig up evidence for the actress without charge. Sample says he was not acting for the governor and the governor denies that he knows anything about the case.

MADE IN JANESVILLE.
 The proposed "Made in Janesville" exhibit at the coming Janesville fair bids fair to open the eyes, not only of visitors, but to many life-long residents of the Bower City as well, to the extent and variety of Janesville's manufactures. It is a fact that scores of articles of beauty and utility are made in Janesville and are in large demand by purchasers and consumers at a distance, but undreamed of by Janesville residents as being among the standard products of the city.

The action of the directors of the Park Association in entering the display space beneath the new grandstand, such an exhibit insures the success of the enterprise, and the result will be most surprising to all visitors. Whatever contributes to the upbuilding of Janesville concerns all of its citizens and commands their interested attention. Several years ago there were numerous show window displays of "Made in Janesville" products that proved most interesting. With the proposed exhibit at the fair grounds even better success can be obtained.

The permanency of the building where the exhibit is to be shown, the lighting and sanitary conditions that will exist, will enable local manufacturers and merchants to install permanent display spaces which can be used year after year, at various fairs. The floor space is almost as large as that of the auditorium, being 192 by 48 feet, with an eleven foot ceiling and with entrances at both ends it will give ample room for displays that should prove most interesting. Meanwhile the directors of the coming fair are sparing no effort to make the initial meeting a success. It is something that Janesville can take a personal pride in and an institution that deserves the heartiest support of all classes. It is for the people, by the people and of the people and every individual citizen can take a personal pride in it.

THE OPERA GLASS.
 Eastern newspapers, in close touch with the ill-fated New Haven railroad, still strenuously object to the report of the interstate commerce commission on the result of their investigation of the financing of that institution. The Wall Street Journal, once a half-hearted supporter of President Wilson and the administration, now says:

"There is something about the attitude of Washington towards the railroad reminiscent of an old story which will bear re-telling. An elderly maiden lady complained to the police of little boys bathing within sight of her window, without the conventional bathing suit. The police commissioner considered this embarrassing scene from the window itself, and pointed out that, at the distance, it was impossible to tell whether they were little boys or not. The lady's reply was, 'Oh, but with an opera glass!' This was in the time of the early Knickerbocker regime.

A howl of righteous indignation has now gone up from newspapers looking for impropriety in the railroad—with an opera-glass. They take their public opinion from Washington and not from the public. The public has little complaint of the railroad in the matter of service. It seems willing to take all it can get, or all the politicians can extort. But the average man thinks the service is good. "Even the service of the sinful New Haven road was good. Its fast trains pass over more junctions and necessary crossovers than any in the United States. It had a remarkable character for safety, in spite of this handicap, until it was politically backed unions took advantage of the agitation against its financing to knock the discipline of the road into smithereens. "Let any fair minded man consider the interstate commerce commission's report to the senate of the United States. Let him take it sentence by sentence. Let him count the inflammatory adjectives, the question-begging epithets, the sweeping conclusions indicting every railroad in the United States. The general result would call for modification if it were an investigation into the government of Rome by Caligula.

"The interstate commerce commission is described as a 'quasi judicial' body. The word 'quasi' must have a new meaning, not shown in the dictionaries. Perhaps it has some relation to politics and the election in November, which the Romans could not possibly have foreseen.

HUERTA RESIGNS.
 "After me the deluge," announced one of the famous Bourbon kings of France, and less than a century after he passed away his successor laid his head upon the guillotine, with his fair queen, that the people might have a royal holiday. France passed through some bloody years, but really no worse than those which now confront Mexico. Rebellion after rebellion, uprising after uprising, ruler after ruler, has led away in this unfortunate republic since it cast off the yoke of Spain to become free and independent. Today Mexico faces another problem. For months past its government has been in the hands of a tyrant, a usurper of power, a murderer of his friend and benefactor, Victoriano Huerta. Today he has resigned, turned his power over to another, and with the armies of the insurgents, the men who opposed his misrule, thundering at the gates of the city of Mexico, sneaks off with the millions he has looted from the national treasury, to live in some European capital.

Victoriano Huerta, deposed dictator of Mexico, was born sixty-three years ago, at Colotlan, Jalisco province, Mexico. The main events of his career follow:
 1871—Graduated from the Chapultepec military school with honors in mathematics and astronomy.
 1876—Participated in the Diaz rebellion; honored by Diaz on his elevation to the presidency and made chief-of-staff, in which capacity he prepared the famous military map of Mexico.
 1887—Made a major in command of a battalion of infantry.
 1891—Made a lieutenant colonel by Diaz and placed in command of the campaigns against the revolutionists in Querro and Morelos.
 1902—Participated in the campaign against the Maya Indians in Yucatan and was made a general by Diaz.
 1911—Commanded the body guard which escorted Diaz from Mexico City to Vera Cruz.
 1912—Chosen by Madero to succeed Salas as commander of the expedition against Orozco, annihilating the latter at the battle of Bachimba.
 1912—December—Sent against Zapata by Madero and then recalled after a dispute between them at Cuernavaca.
 1913—Feb. 9, assumed charge of Madero's troops, opposing the soldiers led by Felix Diaz and Bernardo Reyes; Feb. 18, deposed Madero and proclaimed himself military governor of Mexico City and provisional president; Feb. 19, wired President Taft he had overthrown government, had the military forces with him, and was prepared to re-establish peace in Mexico; Feb. 20, took oath as provisional president; Feb. 22, ordered transfer of Francisco I. Madero from the palace to the penitentiary, and while the transfer was being made Madero was murdered; May 3, recognized by Great Britain; Aug. 1, President Wilson let it be known he would not recognize Huerta; Oct. 11, arrested members of chamber of deputies who disapproved his course as president; Oct. 26, formally elected himself president at a military controlled election.
 1914—Suffered a series of military defeats at hands of constitutionalists by which he lost control of over half of Mexican territory; refused to salute the American flag because of insult to officers of battleship in Tampico harbor; Americans occupied Vera Cruz after two days' fighting; agreed to mediate differences with Americans at conferences at Niagara Falls; mediation failed; appointed Francisco Carral foreign minister and resigned, turning government over to him.

Janesville is building new streets and building streets that will stand the wear and tear of traffic. Not only that, but it is also repaving many other streets and oiling all streets possible, thus insuring good thoroughfares that are a credit and an honor to the community. Cheap streets are always a misdirected economy, as has been found by experience and good roads an asset.

It might be well for the official having charge of the tree-trimming to make a visit through the various wards and suggest certain immediate alterations. The present season has caused shrubs and trees to grow at a wonderful rate and the trimming has not kept pace with the growth.

Now that Karel is in the field and Aylward has taken the bit in his teeth and denounced him and his candidacy and abused the republicans who oppose high taxes, we may expect almost anything to happen.

On The Spur of The Moment

The Congressional Campaign. Now comes the campaign orator, life of the foghorn voice. Who tries to tell us poor galoots how we should make choice. The constitution, he explains. So hard, to earn his pelf. You'd think, to listen to his talk. He wrote the thing himself. He charms the birds out of the trees. He hypnotizes folks. And punctuates his sage remarks With comic weekly jokes. He talks about George Washington and Lincoln without end. You'd think that each of them had been His lifelong bosom friend.

At times he "views with great alarm." And then he "points with pride." And tells us how the heroes of The Revolution died. The price of rubber in Peru. Or treats with Japs up on Grace. He can discuss with equal grace. He is a wondrous man.

We've got to listen to him, though. It is the penalty Of living in a country that. Of the world proclaims as free. Of course, we always go and vote The way that we think best. Regardless of the siren song Of this perennial pest.

Uncle Abner. Amry Tibbs has got three leaks in the roof of his house and when it rains he sends his kids up on the roof to sit on 'em. He has got enough kids to cover two more leaks if the same should occur. Mrs. Hank Tumms expects to take in summer boarders again this year and has bought one dozen of "fresh vegetables" down at Tibbits' grocery.

Elmer Jones has worn out four hammocks for Miss Amy Pringle, and her father says if Elmer don't pop soon there will not be any more.

hammocks. Amy says these home-grown Romeos ain't much good. It takes a "traveller" man to pop the question quick, but the trouble with the latter is that they are all married.

Luke Butts of this town, who hasn't been much of a success up to this time, has got a job as porter in a Chicago hotel and expects to own an automobile in a month and to retire from active business life by the end of the summer.

When you dodge an automobile you get in front of a motorcycle, so what's the use?

Doc Hanks, our village dentist, says the graveyards of today are the gold mines of tomorrow. Doc put in three fillings last week and it wasn't much of a week, either.

From the Hickeyville Clarion. Mr. Amry Hicks, who went west to make his fortune six months ago, having washed his hands of this place forever, has returned and accepted a position as first assistant chambermaid at Amos Butts' jivery, feed and sales stables.

Hank Tumms, one of our local philanthropists, has figured out a scheme to beat the penny-in-the-slot machine in the office of the Huttel Hickeyville. He has bored a hole in a one-cent piece and tied a silk thread to it. After he works the machine eight or ten times and gets a pocketful of peanuts, he yanks the cent out and puts it away. Constable Ezra Hand, who has been at work on the case, has been considerably baffled, as Hank has worn a false mustache and blue eyeglasses while doing the work. The constable has seen him workin' the machine several times, but on account of the false mustache and eyeglasses he has hesitated to step up and make the arrest for fear he might get the wrong party.

Owing to the fact that warm weather is here and the postage stamps are together, Postmaster William Tibbits has warned the public to buy all of the stamps they need now for the summer, as he is going to stop keeping them until cold weather sets in again.

Things to Think About. There are 5,687,873,548 microbes on a $20.00 bill. If you don't believe it take one of your $20.00 bills some dull afternoon and count them.

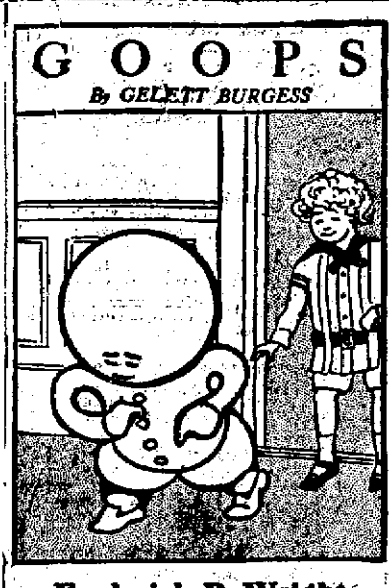

Married men are more thoughtful than single men. Not because they want to be, but because they have to be. If you want a meal of considerable variety one in fact which contains almost everything, order Hungarian goulash.

Fullman car porters are somewhat dignified, but they will not refuse 10 cents if you don't offer them any more.

See Life in Right Light. Hold your dull life up to the light, and see how it will be transfigured. Life is not meant to be a path of ease, but steep and rugged; and it is only through self-denial, discouragement, discipline and trial that you may attain the higher life.—Light on the Hidden Way.

Three Pernicious Things. Three things too much and three too little are pernicious to man—to speak much and know little, to spend much and have little, to presume much and be worth little.—Cervantes.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY
 $10,000 for 100 Words
 2nd Chapter Tonight at the Majestic

If you missed the first chapter, read the following synopsis of it before seeing the second tonight.

Stanley Hargreave, millionaire, having joined what he believed to be a great secret socialistic movement, finds that in reality he has been trapped by the Black Hundred. After a miraculous escape from the clutches of the brilliant thieves he lives the life of a recluse for eighteen years. One night, surrendering to a restless spirit of rebellion, Hargreave enters a Broadway restaurant and there comes face to face with the Black Hundred's leader, Braine.

After the meeting, during which neither man apparently recognizes the other, Hargreave hurries to his magnificent Riverside home and lays plans for making his escape from the country. He writes a letter to the girls' school in New Jersey where eighteen years before he had mysteriously left on the doorstep of the institution his tiny baby daughter—named "Florence Gray" by the note attached to the bundle—and arranges that she be sent to him at once. He also pays a visit to the hangar of a daredevil aviator.

Braine and members of his band surround Hargreave's home at night, but as they enter the house the watchers outside see a balloon leave the roof. The safe is found empty—the million which Hargreave was known to have drawn that day gone. While the rogues are rummaging about the house, venting their spite, one of the men from outside bursts in. "The old man is dead and the money is at the bottom of the ocean," he cries. "We punctured her. She's gone!"

Slightly Mixed Metaphor.
 An eloquent Irish candidate, speaking of a certain eminent statesman, said: "His smooth tongue is that of a serpent which takes but to destroy, and which holds out sugar plums in one hand, while in the other it holds an unsheathed dagger behind its back."

Irony From John Bull.

Why use kerosene lamps and hot cook stoves in your home when for a small sum of money you can install a Gasoline Gas plant and do away with the drudgery of cleaning lamps and the insufferable heat of a Cook Stove.

We have purchased of Weirick & Co., Beloit, all their interest in the GIANT Gas Machine and are now building them in our own shop in Janesville.

These machines are built for hard usage and will last a lifetime. They are not very expensive to install and will produce Gas from Gasoline at cost of from 70 to 80 cents per thousand feet. Write us for circulars describing them and our man will call and tell you about them without expense to you.

INTERESTING DATA ON FARM MANAGEMENT

ALLEN B. WEST GIVES ACCOUNTS FROM CONTEST RECENTLY HELD.

ARRANGES SUBJECTS

So That They Might Be More Easily Understood—Content Successful.

The data secured from the 150 farms which took part in the recent farm management contest present some interesting items well worth the consideration of the Rock county farmer.

In fact the data secured, and made available to the farmers of the state, are of such value in teaching agriculture, whether in farming or in teaching culture, is probably the most valuable thing about this contest, presenting as it does the results of the year's experience of one hundred and fifty farmers.

Under the general head of "Factors That Make for Success in Farming," data has been arranged under different heads such as managerial income, capital, crops, livestock, labor, receipts, production, etc.

Sheets giving statistics are prepared for the different counties giving the average for the county, and comparing that with the total average for the state, and the average of the ten best and the ten poorest farms.

The first item to attract attention is that of the managerial income or profit. The farmer made on his farm after allowing 5 per cent on the investment.

We find that on an average these one hundred and fifty farmers made $1,272.73. The best ten farms, however, made on the average $5,394.45, while the ten poorest farms lacked $716 of making 5 per cent on their investment. Then the question naturally arises as to the factors which make for success in the one case and failure in the other.

It is not in the size of the farm, evidently for the table shows only a difference of four acres between the average of the ten best and ten poorest farms, and both of them being some twenty acres more than the average for the 150 farms.

The ten best farms have on the average seventeen acres more in crops than the ten poorest, while curiously enough the number of acres in pasture varies only by a fraction of an acre, it being in round numbers fifty-three acres in each case.

When we come to study the amount of stock kept on this 53 acres of pasture the ten best farms average 11.6 cows, while the ten poorest average only 11.6 cows, which shows a great difference.

The best farms have nearly one five more brood sows. The ten best farms also require one more man to perform the work, but there is a vast difference between the results obtained—in the one case $716 and in the other $5,000. So it is evident that to employ the extra man, under the study of receipts, we find that the average percentage of receipts from crops was greater by 9 in the case of the 10 poorest than the 10 best, it being as follows:

Per cent of total, 15.57.
Average for ten poorest, 24.65 per cent. The average percentage from receipts from live stock on the ten poorest farms also exceeded that on the ten best farms by four, being in the one case 47 per cent and in the other 43 per cent.

It seems fair to conclude from a study of the data that:

1. That the most successful of these 150 farms were dairy or stock farms.
2. That alfalfa, clover and silage are most important factors in the economical production of dairy products.
3. That investment in pure bred and high grade dairy stock pays large returns.
4. That those farmers keeping the most cows in proportion to size of the farm.
5. That to successfully manage a farm one must have a sufficient operating capital. Without it one is "making bricks without straw."

The average of the ten best farms in yield per acre of corn was 56.02 bushels against 40.88 on the ten poorest, a difference of nearly 16 bushels per acre, which counts up quite rapidly if one is not so far apart, the best being only about 4 bushels per acre in advance.

When it comes to alfalfa we find another significant difference, the ten best farms growing 1.5 tons of alfalfa instead of the yield per acre. Only two of the ten poorest farms grow alfalfa at all, and in the entire list of the ten farms of lowest rank only 3 acres of alfalfa is grown, while the ten best farms grow alfalfa with a total of 205.94 acres. In the production of other hay the ten poorest farms lead in the number of acres and also in the yield per acre.

Deducting from this the operating capital and driving by the average acres, we find that the best farms are valued at a little less than $100 per acre and the ten poorest at a little more than $100 per acre. If we reckon a little further we will find that had the ten poorest farms realized the managerial income that was realized by the ten best, they could instead of lacking $716 of 5 per cent interest have secured an income of $4,616. Had they done as well as the average of the 150 farms they would have made $2,510, which is a sum not to be despised. Another point of significance demands attention here.

The capital is divided into "fixed" and "operating" capital, the latter being the money invested in stock, machinery, etc., not included in the real estate. The average of the most successful this average 30.97 per cent of the fixed capital. In the most successful 21.80 per cent.

This gives rise to the conclusion that where the investment in good stock and good machinery will give ample returns which it will be impossible to secure in any other way.

FARM PRODUCE TO BE SENT THROUGH MAIL

Eggs, Butter and Vegetables May Be Shipped by Parcel Post in the Near Future.

A complete express system for farmers along rural routes is contemplated by Postmaster General Burleson and if his plans and those of his assistants prove successful in the future all farm produce will be sent through the mails. The consumer directly by parcel post. This will be accomplished by means of a new rate which has been recently suggested for carrying farm products through the mails. This rate is called "Hardy farm produce box" as it is constructed of light but durable material and has separate compartments for the different staples and all kinds of vegetables. In fact any kind of farm produce in hundred pound packages or less may be mailed through the mails. This rate is out as soon as they arrive. It is intended that each farmer will buy a box and keep it for his use. The rural carriers and country drivers a small road wagon and collect the crates from the farms on their routes and to return them to the same farm from where they were taken. In this way the crates may be made to serve until they are out and they are said to be almost indestructible. This plan has been successfully tried out in different districts throughout the United States and will eventually be used throughout the country. It is hoped that this innovation will be instrumental in reducing the high cost of living by the taking of the farmer at the very door of the producer. The project is as yet in an experimental stage, farmers throughout the country as well as the consumers it should prove most successful.

SCHUMAKER PLEADS GUILTY TO ASSAULT

Five Drunks in Court—Mike O'Garra Given One Year in County Jail for Drunkenness.

A compromise was reached in the action of Alice Foss against her sister, Mrs. Bessie Coon and Ernest Schumaker by the attorneys in the municipal court this morning. The Coon woman and Schumaker were charged with an alleged assault on Alice Foss in a disturbance several weeks ago.

On the motion of E. H. Peterson, attorney for the defendants, the complaint against Bessie Coon was dropped and Schumaker changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. S. D. Tallman, prosecuting lawyer, said that this was the agreement reached by the parties, the sister not wishing to press charges against Mrs. Coon. Judge Maxfield granted the motion and declared he wished time to take testimony on the case before passing sentence on Schumaker. The case was adjourned one week. Witnesses who had been subpoenaed were dismissed.

Changes Plea. Clayton Moore was arraigned in court on the charge of second offense drunkenness and when his case was called he pleaded guilty and demanded an examination. Judge Maxfield lodged against Moore by F. H. Bellharts, who alleged that Moore, while intoxicated, assaulted him at the cannery factory yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bellharts also charged that Moore, suspiciously barked nose and enlarged jaw, showing that Moore had a vicious wallop.

Officer Gower was called to the factory and arrived just as Moore was going across the field. In making the arrest Gower attempted to make Moore precede him into the police wagon. Moore obtained the whip and struck the officer with the butt end and across the forehead and started to grapple with him. The billy club of the officer was brought into use and Moore was finally handcuffed and jailed.

After pleading not guilty and staying in jail for half an hour Moore experienced a change of mind and asked to be allowed to waive his examination and plead guilty. This he was allowed to do. For trial on July 27 the case was adjourned until Friday morning to investigate facts concerning the trouble at the factory.

Given Year's Term. Mike O'Garra also charged his plea to guilty to the complaint of second offense drunkenness and waived his right for an examination. One year under the commitment law was the punishment administered by Judge Maxfield. Otto Walker, also charged with second offense drunkenness, received ninety days and the pledge for one year. Walker just completed serving a stiff term and landed in jail again yesterday when he "came to town" to attend a funeral. "You must just about worn out your chances," remarked Judge Maxfield. "If you violate your pledge you will force me to send you to the penitentiary," warned the court.

Two Given Fines. Oliver Severson, a transient laborer, pleaded guilty to being intoxicated and was given seven days in default of five dollars and costs. Charles Allen of Shopiere drew five dollar fine and costs, which was paid for drunkenness.

August Helm of La Prairie, through his attorney, J. H. McGowan, pled guilty to the charge of profane language. District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie of "pointing a revolver" at Edward Urban. A charge of threatening to kill was dropped by the district attorney. The case was set for trial on July 27th. In trouble over farm property, Helm, who is a tenant on Urban's farm, is alleged to have threatened Urban with a revolver.

The charges against Theo. Fushka, the foreigner charged with drunkenness, were dismissed by Judge Maxfield after an investigation of the case. Fushka, who appeared before the court and begged for mercy. A pledge for one year was taken by the prisoner and the case dismissed as payment had been made for damage caused at the Peterson residence.

Offering Blood Corpuscles.
The crystals of the blood of a white man are extremely small, measuring less than one two-thousandth part of an inch in length and are shaped rather like thin bricks. The blood crystals of a negro appear like thin red plates, or long, thin, flat bars, easily distinguishable from those of a white man.

"Everybody's doing it." Doing what? Reading the want ads.

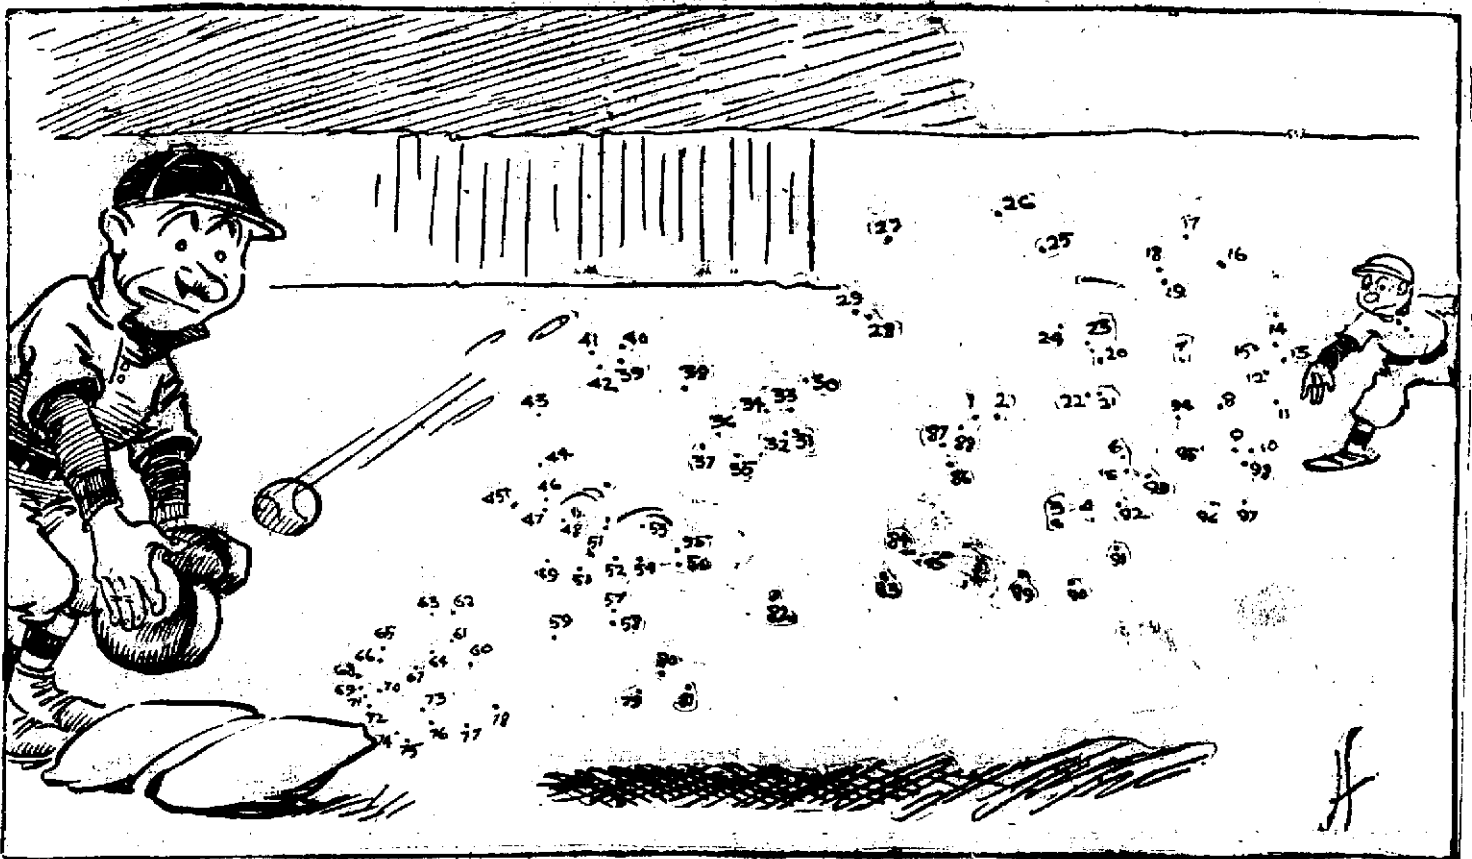

Trying to Do Too Much.
Many business men are coming to the conclusion that they would accomplish more if they attempted less. Life is becoming overcrowded. A succession of little things fill the time that could more wisely be used for the contemplation of great tasks and the contemplation of lofty purposes. To simplify is to strengthen. Life is more than a mere round of engagements; it is a conscious enjoyment and employment of the spirit's highest capacities.

Humorous Russian Coiners.
The Russian coiners, who for some time have been circulating throughout southern Russia false half-ruble pieces, commonly known as poltnik, certainly have a fine sense of humor. The false coins are excellently fabricated, and ring like the genuine half-rubles. They came to be detected chiefly by the absence on their outer edge of the usual mint inscription giving, in zolotniki and doll, the amount of silver contained in the poltnik. The later issue of the counterfeit coin has an inscription on the outer edge, reading "Our money is no worse than yours," a sly and impudent hit at the authorities of the imperial mint. So long as the inscription is there the man in the street does not take the trouble to decipher it. So far the police have been unable to trace the coiners.

He Lost the Wager.
A man who prided himself on a wonderful imagination that could conceive the biggest lies on record once made a wager that he could tell a greater falsehood than any man in the town where he resided. The stakes being deposited, he proclaimed that he once threw a nail with such force that it pierced the moon. "Aye, that is true," exclaimed another man. "I saw him do it, for I stood on the other side and caught the nail."

THE JUSTICE of giving men and women equal pay for equal work is a subject on which I have often been asked to write.

I have hitherto hung back because I think it is a rather involved question. The letter friends who have written to me on this matter have been women, and they have taken the stand that there is but one side to the question—namely, that a woman holding a position similar to that held by a man ought to be paid exactly the same.

I cannot settle the matter quite so simply in my mind. It seems to me that there are two sides to it, although I have my own opinion as to which is the right one.

Let's examine them both. First, we are told that a woman's term of service is likely to be shorter than a man's. Now it is the theory, among business men, that an employee is seldom worth what he is paid during the time that he is learning the business. If this is true, the deficit must be charged up to the period when he is worth his wage. When this period is shorter in the woman's case the employer loses in paying men and women both the same wage. Personally, I believe that the employee is usually worth the small wage that he gets from the very start.

If he is, that argument crumbles to nothing. The next argument is that women are more likely to be absent on account of sickness or home conditions than men, and hence are less dependable and less valuable. That is certainly true in some cases, and I cannot see how the woman who is always asking for a week or a day off, regardless of her employer's need of her, can expect the same pay as a man who does not require these favors. On the other hand, I know women who are quite as steady and faithful workers as men and I do not see why their pay should be smaller than a man's pay just because some woman is irresponsible.

Another argument is that a man has a larger duty to society. That is, he has a family to support and therefore deserves a larger wage. It sounds very conclusive, doesn't it? But when, oh when, did the average employer really pay his workers according to the workers' needs rather than their value. By that criterion the stupid man with nine children would be paid more than the clever, efficient employee with only one child. Can you imagine an employer doing that? Furthermore, in many cases where men and women do equal work and receive unequal pay, the man is a bachelor with only himself to support, and the woman has a mother, younger sister or invalid husband on her hands. In this case the woman ought to get the larger pay, if employers are really influenced by the employee's obligation to society. But I can't say I ever knew it to work out that way.

It seems to me that the matter boils down to this. Circumstances alter cases. Some women deserve as much pay as men in similar positions, other women do not. An honest and square employer ought to be able to judge which is the case and to act accordingly. Of course, the niggardly man will always argue that woman ought to get less because that theory is kinder to his pocket. But I do not see how any generous minded lover of justice can take that view of the case.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two girls about thirteen years and would like your advice.

(1) We go with a boy about our same age and he is very nice to us while we are with him, but as soon as the other girls come along he does not pay any attention to us.

W. O. U. I. I would like to know what we can do so he will like us just as well.

(2) We went to a picnic with a boy and he paid our carfare. Do you think it was respectable?

(3) Could you tell us a few things we could do this summer to pass away time?

(4) A girl friend of mine who is just the same age as we, wears socks. Do you think she is too large?

BLUE AND GRAY EYES. (1) The boy likes you just as well as the other girls, but he is self-conscious when he sees the other girls coming, and he is afraid he will be teased if he appears to prefer your company.

(2) It was perfectly correct for him to pay your carfare.

(3) You might start making your Christmas presents now.

(4) She may be small for her age. However, I should think it would be better for her to wear regular stockings at her age.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am seventeen years old. My friend asked me to go to the lake with him. My girl friend is going, so I would like to go. What would you advise me to do?

(2) My mother objects to me going with him on account of my religion. I don't know how to tell him to stop coming to see me, so if you would give me some advice, I would be very much obliged.

WORRIED. (1) If you are going with several other people and your parents think it is all right, there may be no harm in going. But be sure that only respectable people are in the crowd.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING. Iron rust will disappear if the spot is soaked in rice water.

When pressing woolen goods, cover with a sheet of brown paper in place of cloth. No lint will be the result. Never use a brush when cleaning silk goods. Wipe carefully with a piece of velvet.

If spots fall on the carpet, cover with salt and brush up lightly.

THE TABLE. Devilled Crabs: Mix two cans of crabs with one cupful of cream, two tablespoonsful of Worcestershire sauce, two tablespoonsful of melted butter, half a cupful of sherry, the yolks of three hard-boiled eggs, a little nutmeg and pepper and salt to taste. Bake in shells, sprinkle with cracker crumbs and place a small piece of butter on each.

Baked Crabs: Break the claws off boiled crabs, open shells and remove the spongy fingers and stomach. Pick the fish out and cut into small pieces. Mix a little rich gravy with it, or cream, if you have it; add some curry powder and bread crumbs; salt and pepper to taste. Fill the shells and bake.

Sturgeon: Two pounds of sturgeon, one pint of milk, one tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of pepper. Cut the fish into small squares, put them in a steaming pan with two quarts of water, drain the sturgeon for fifteen minutes, drain the water off. Add the butter, salt and pepper. Moisten the flour with a little of the milk; add the rest and pour it over the sturgeon, then let it come to a boil and serve.

Stewed Codfish—One-half pound of

Make a pint of tomato sauce, thickened and seasoned as usual, and pour the stock containing the corn and beans upon this. Season to taste and serve very hot, without straining. This soup can be made from canned corn and string beans.

IMPORTANCE OF CLEANLINESS.

It is quite evident that the market price of food materials is not regulated by their actual value for nutrition. For instance, an ounce of protein or fat from the tenderness of beef is no more nutritious than that from a round or a shoulder, but it costs considerably more. The agreeableness of food to the buyer's fancy has much to do in deciding the current demand and selling price. Animal foods, such as meat, fish and milk, and vegetable foods, such as cereals, fresh fruits and so on, are all wholesome and useful. It is a common custom to depend on animal foods quite largely for supplying protein and fats. Carbohydrate comes almost entirely from vegetable foods.

There is a difference in the cost of nutrients in foods already prepared for use, and in the same materials not so prepared. For instance, wheat made into ordinary prepared breakfast cereal might contain no more available protein or energy than the same wheat made into flour, but the breakfast cereals afford a pleasing variety in the diet, and often require little or no cooking, thereby saving fuel and labor. If the breakfast cereal does not cost much more than the flour, the difference may be offset by its convenience and palatability. The use of different foods of a similar nature is an easy way of getting the variety we all need in our diet.

A common mistake in buying foods is the selection of the most expensive kinds when cheaper ones would serve the purpose just as well. The maxim that "the best is the cheapest" is not always true of food. The plain, substantial, standard food materials, like the cheaper cuts of meat and fish, milk, flour, corn meal, oatmeal, beans and potatoes are as digestible and nutritious and as well fitted for the nourishment of people in good health as are any of the costlier materials. We endeavor to make our diet suit our palate by paying high prices in the market rather than by skillful cooking and tasteful serving at home.

Unless care is exercised in selecting food a diet may result which is one-sided or badly balanced—that is, one in which either protein or fats and carbohydrates are provided in excess. If a person consumes large amounts of meat and little vegetable food, the diet will be too rich in protein and may be harmful. On the other hand, if pastry, butter and such foods are eaten in preference to a more varied diet, the food will furnish too much energy and too little building material.

The use of excessive quantities of food, a common dietary error in this country, entails a loss of food in at least three ways. In the first place, more food is eaten than can properly be utilized by the body. This is not universally true, for there are some who do not eat enough for healthful nourishment. But the eating habits of many are vicious, resulting not only in a loss of food material but in an increase in the labor of digestion, to say nothing of the injurious effects which overeating may have upon the health in general. On the other hand we must not forget that many—and not always those in poor circumstances—are undernourished. Either extreme is to be avoided.

Peggy & Company

Peggy Confesses in Part, and Further Light Is Shed by a Visiting Young Man.

Buy it in Jamesville. It's cheaper.

PEGGY has confessed to mother that while it is quite true as father and Tom suggested, that she had acquired herself with great eagerness in the kitchen, still there were a few little things, here and there, which she felt she had not completely mastered. She has very prudently failed to mention the disastrous incident of the more than parboiled potatoes. Also she has shown nice tact in forgetting the occasion of wiping off the top of the stove with the dish towel.

Filling the sink with coffee grounds and boiling the tea in the water were two more slips that she discreetly left unmentioned.

This morning Peggy and mother are foregathered in the kitchen with an eye toward completing Peggy's culinary tuition. It is a sort of post-graduate course, wherein Peggy is to be shown the few remaining finer points that she may step forth a thoroughly finished and dependable cook.

Peggy has approached this little engagement with a vague uneasiness, feeling that perhaps in a hapless moment she might commit a blunder. She has very prudently failed to mention the disastrous incident of the more than parboiled potatoes. Also she has shown nice tact in forgetting the occasion of wiping off the top of the stove with the dish towel.

All has gone quite well indeed and mother apparently had not been moved to the slightest suspicion, when Walter, now, thrusts his head in the kitchen door, just as he had the day when Peggy had the unhappy experience with the boiled potatoes.

After the usual hearty greetings, Walter selects a chair uninvited and his mood being a jocular and flippant one, he proceeds to indulge in a variety of burlesquing remarks.

The picture of Peggy thus stirring about in the kitchen under the all-seeing maternal eye seems to appeal to Walter as being very comical indeed. Unmindful of mother's very evident alarm, he rallies her on her cooking attainments, saying something in a veiled way about a "can of beans." Behind mother's back Peggy is making a frantic demonstration of head waving a sauce pan aloft in a most threatening manner.

Walter is subdued at last and goes on his way, pausing between the verse and chorus of his whistling to chuckle a chuckle or two. If he thinks, however, that his innuendo conveyed nothing to Peggy's mother he entertains a grievous misapprehension. Mrs. Gray, though holding her counsel, feels that a clearer light has been thrown on the state of things during her absence and in her thoughts she is severely questioning the veracity of her husband and son.

And Peggy is also reflecting. She is contemplating the most awful things she'll do when she "gets Walter Cowell."

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

"We have lived in this neighborhood four months and two of the neighbors have called upon us. If it had not been for the friends we know I should have been a very lonely person indeed as far as knowing people is concerned." The speaker was a woman who had left her youth behind her. She had no children. They had lately moved to the little town where this happened. As her husband was away all day at work, and met and mingled with many while so engaged he did not mind the absence of callers. Being a quiet person she looked forward each day with keen pleasure to the quiet evenings at home with his pipe and a good book. It seems incredible that people will allow months to pass before calling on a new neighbor; will pass her on the street, knowing who she is, where she lives, and stare at her as if she were sort of an extinct species or as if they possessed the powers of an x-ray.

In large cities it is quite the thing to not know your neighbors—in fact it is sometimes safer. But, in cities the size of ours, where residential sections are nicely roped off (are they not?) it seems queer to say the least to see a person every day in the week to look at them, to pass them by with a stoical face. At least we like to think our face is stoical. That's the adjective they use to describe the wooden looking that used to stand outside every well regulated cigar shop. "You're welcome!"

Once a woman moved to our town from a city whose inhabitants were all socially inclined. There she had known all her neighbors. Here they left her severely alone. She had four babies, so her days were well-filled; she had not time to be lonely. It was not until she was not meeting much of her neighbors. After a bit she woke up. The woman next door had no child—on, was on in years. She never saw a neighbor. A young woman's home and after a three weeks' battle with pneumonia, one of her twin babies died. The doctor had called daily, but the neighbors were, with the exception of three women, always so busy. When the little coffin was brought into the home there was consternation for a while. They knew her then. They all called. When the lady on the corner with the kind, motherly face and silvery hair entered the stricken home she was profuse in her utterances of sympathy. The young mother burst into tears. "You all know me now," she sobbed. "But I keep thinking it is from curiosity you come, as none of you ever called before. I was so lonely when my baby was ill; so lonely when my baby is gone you come with your protestations, your condolences. I wish you had called before." This sounds almost brutally rude, but it really happened right here in your own home town. After all, the roses we pile on the graves of the dead are not half the value of the kindnesses we did for them in life. Are you too self-centered? Do you ever see the stranger at your gate?

Your Neighbors Need Is Your Opportunity, Use It.

A woman living in the country where berries grew in abundance made a number of glasses of jam with the intention of selling it. She planned to put it in a store down town, but one of her boys suggested she simply advertise it.

"We have the phone," he said. "Create a demand by advertising. I'll do the delivering."

The Mother was a bit skeptical, but she ran the ad.

Today that woman sells more canned fruit than you'd think it possible for one woman to market. Sells it with a fine profit too.

MRS. BEIDEL TELLS WOMEN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her in Health for 14 Years.

Shippensburg, Pa.—"It was several years ago that I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I then suffered terribly every month. My husband bought me a bottle of it and it helped me right away. Then after my second child was born I had a female trouble very badly and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and in a short time was cured and have been in excellent health since. I always praise the Compound whenever I have an opportunity as I know it helped me and will help others. Lately I have given the Compound to my daughter and I wish all suffering women would take it and be convinced of its worth."—Mrs. JAMES A. BEIDEL, 113 N. Penn Street, Shippensburg, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Pigs in a Monoplane.
"When pigs begin to fly," will no longer convey quite such a notion of impossibility, for at Hendon, England, the other evening a pair of them enjoyed a crowded five minutes of more or less glorious life in a Bleriot monoplane, under the pilotage of Gustave Hamel. Mrs. Hart Davis was one of hundreds at the aerodrome to see famous skyman perform for the benefit of Marcel Desoutter, the young Frenchman, who recently broke his leg in pursuit of the science of aviation. She had a couple of small black pet pigs with her, and carrying one under each arm, she induced Hamel, who has had dogs and cats as his aerial companions before, to give them a thrilling sensation. They squeaked a little, were photographed a great deal, and, amidst laughter from the group surrounding the yellow Bleriot, off they started, and five minutes later down they came quite safely.

ALONE IN THE WILDERNESS

By JOSEPH KNOWLES

Copyright, 1913, by Small, Maynard & Co.

"And as I thought I forgot the picture before me. I said to myself, 'Here, I know something about nature. I wonder if it would not be possible for me to do something for the benefit of others.'"

Then I would laugh at the idea of my doing anything for the world! Probably all of us have wild dreams now and then. I am beginning to think that wild dreams are wonderful things to have. I have always hoped, more than anything else, that I might sometime do something which would benefit mankind, even in a small way.

I believed there was too much artificial life at the present day in the cities. I found myself comparing our present mode of living with the wild, rugged life of the great outdoors. Then all of a sudden I wondered if the man of the present day could leave all his luxury behind him and go back into the wilderness and live on what nature intended him to have.

In that thought came the birth of the idea.

That night I went down to the hotel in Bradford and began talking it over with several of my friends. At first they all laughed at the absurdity of a man of today going back to the life of the primitive man of yesterday. I remember as we sat around the fireplace they asked me all kinds of questions. I told them that in order to make such an experiment interesting it would be necessary for a man to enter the woods entirely naked, without even a match or a knife, and live a stipulated time without the slightest communication or aid from the outside world.

"What would you do for fire?" one man asked me.

I replied to that very quickly. Another wanted to know what food I would be able to get in the wilderness and how I would get it without weapons. I mentioned a dozen ways.

Then the conversation became like a game. Every one wanted to see if he couldn't stick me in some way.

That night I couldn't think of a single thing that would keep me from undertaking such an experiment.

In the busy days which followed I promptly forgot all about the idea, just as nine-tenths of all ideas are forgotten. Not until the beginning of last summer did the thought take hold of me again.

From time to time my friends would jokingly inquire when I was going to leave them and become a wild man.

Then all of a sudden it hit me hard. Another mood seized me like the one I had felt in the cabin while painting the picture of the moose. I said—and this time I meant it, "I'll try this stunt and demonstrate to the people that there are marvelous things to be derived from life in the great outdoors."

When I told my friends that I really was going to try the experiment during the months of August and September they became serious, indeed. They were not joking now when they cried, "Do not think of such a thing!" They reminded me that it might be easy enough to answer all their theoretical questions satisfactorily, but to actually find fire and food and clothing would be impractical and, indeed, utterly impossible.

But my mind was fully made up. I left Bradford immediately for Boston to make preparations for the trip. By preparations I do not mean that I went back to the city to train for the trip. I went to Boston simply to discuss with other friends the plans that were in my mind.

First of all, it was necessary for me to choose a location for the experiment. This was some task, inasmuch as I desired to enter a wilderness far away from civilization, where I would not be bothered by people from the outside world.

Finally I decided that I would go into the forest on the 4th of August. In what is known in the northwest Maine country as the Dead River region.

This country is covered with heavy black growth timber. Directly north is Bear mountain, below which stretches Spencer lake. To the east is Little Spencer, with Head mountain just beyond. Horseshoe pond and the Spencer stream lie to the southward, and the domain is bounded on the west by King and Bartlett lake.

I selected this particular time for the experiment because I wanted it to be the most severe kind of a test. I was handicapped by civilization's habits and comforts. My skin was not tough. My muscles were not firm, and my stomach was used to seasoned and well cooked food.

However, I still retained my knowledge of the woods, and it was on that alone I placed dependence. It is in the mind, I claim, the mind that has been trained to know nature, that the spark of complete independence is retained down through the ages.

As Aug. 4 drew near some of my closest friends literally begged me to abandon the idea. They warned me that I might become ill and wreck my future health, or even lose my life, and all that kind of talk. They were good to me, and I appreciated their feelings but I knew they did not understand. I knew better. I was confident.

I left Boston for Bigelow, Me., which is the end of the railroad in that part of the country. From there I took the stage for eight miles to Eustis, a village of fifty inhabitants, situated on the edge of the forest.

Then came something worse than living two months alone in the forest—a ride for sixteen miles over the King and Bartlett backboard trail. The remains of this road brought me to the King and Bartlett camps.

Directly in front of these camps is the King and Bartlett lake. It was a mile across to the opposite shore where, in the presence of professional men and sportsmen, who were stoppied at the camps in the vicinity, I disrobed and started for the wilds, leaving my clothes behind and taking absolutely nothing with me.

Now just a few words about myself. I had traveled nearly all over the world. Later I entered the United States navy, where I served enlistments for a number of years. After that I decided I would like to try sailing on the fresh water lakes. So I left the coast and sailed on the great lakes for another twelve months.

It was while I was in that country that I became acquainted with tribes of Algonk and Chippewa Indians. They were scattered all along the west coast of Michigan. I gave up the sailing and went among them. That year I went back into the mountains and hunted and trapped with them. Of course I picked up valuable knowledge about the woods under these conditions.

To go back to the beginning of my life in the wilderness, heavy skies and a steady drizzle of rain greeted me on the morning of Aug. 4 when I awoke in the King and Bartlett camps. However, the weather didn't bother me.

The sportsmen and professional men who were interested in my departure joked with me and laughingly said that they would see me back again that night. Shortly after 9 o'clock we all left the camps for the opposite side of King and Bartlett lake.

The drizzle had increased to a steady downpour, and the brown suit of clothes which I wore became wet through.

The time for my entering the forest was about 10 o'clock.

The boats landed at the foot of what is known as the Spencer trail, which rises straight up the side of Bear mountain and winds its way up over the crest and down the other side for five miles through the woods to Spencer lake.

A LODGING FOR THE NIGHT

By Robert Louis Stevenson

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Booth Tarkington, Jack London, Alfred Henry Lewis and Richard Harding Davis was "A Lodging for the Night," by Robert Louis Stevenson.

BOOTH TARKINGTON

"I have one white," returned the poet, laughing. "I got it out of a dead jade's stocking in a porch. She was as dead as Caesar, poor wench, and as cold as a church, with bits of ribbon sticking in her hair. This is a hard world in winter for wolves and wenchies and poor rogues like me."

"I," said the old man, "am Enguerand de la Feuillie, signor de Brissetout, bailli du Patatrac. Who and what may you be?"

Villon rose and made a suitable reverence. "I am called Francis Villon," he said, "a poor master of arts of this university. I know some Latin and a deal of vice. I can make chansons, ballads, lais, virelais and roundels, and I am very fond of wine. I was born in a garret, and I shall not improbably die upon the gallows. I may add, my lord, that from this night forward I am your lordship's very obsequious servant to command."

"No servant of mine," said the knight. "My guest for this evening, and no more."

"A very grateful guest," said Villon politely, and he drank in dumb show to his entertainer.

"You are shrewd," began the old man, tapping his forehead. "Very shrewd. You have learning. You are a clerk, and yet you take a small piece of money off a dead woman in the street. Is it not a kind of theft?"

"It is a kind of theft much practiced in the wars, my lord."

"The wars are the field of honor," returned the old man proudly. "There a man plays his life upon the cast. He fights in the name of his lord the king, his Lord God, and all their lordships the holy saints and angels."

"Put it," said Villon, "that I were really a thief, should I not play my life also and against heavier odds?"

"For gain, but not for honor."

"Gain!" repeated Villon, with a shrug. "Gain! The poor fellow wants supper and takes it. So does the soldier in a camp. Why, what are all these requisitions we hear so much about?"

"These things are a necessity of war which the townborn must endure with constancy. Look at us two," said his lordship. "I am old, strong and honored. If I were turned from my house tomorrow hundreds would be proud to shelter me. Poor people would go out and pass the night in the streets with their children if I merely hinted that I wished to be alone. And I find you up, wandering homeless and picking farthings off dead women by the wayside! I fear you mean nothing."

I have seen you tremble and lose countenance at a word. I wait for your stammer contentedly in my own house. If it please the king to call me out again, upon the field of battle, you look for the gallows—a rough, swift death, without hope or honor. Is there no difference between these two?"

"As far as to the moment," Villon acquiesced. "But if I had been born Lord of Brissetout and you had been the poor scholar Francis Villon, should not I have been the soldier and you the thief?"

"A thief?" cried the old man. "I a thief! If you understood your words you would repent them."

Villon turned out his hands with a gesture of imitable impudence. "If your lordship had done me the honor to follow my argument," he said, "I do you too much honor in submitting to your presence," said the knight.

"Learn to curb your tongue when you speak with old and honorable men, or some one hatter than I may remove you in a sharper fashion." And he rose and paced the lower end of the apartment, struggling with anger and antipathy. Villon surreptitiously reddened his cap and settled himself more comfortably in the chair, crossing his knees and leaning his head upon one hand and the elbow against the back of the chair. He was now replete and warm, and he was in nowise frightened for his host, having gauged him as justly as was possible between two such different characters. The night was far spent, and in a very comfortable fashion after all, and he felt morally certain of a safe departure on the morrow.

"Tell me one thing," said the old man, pausing in his walk. "Are you really a thief?"

"I claim the sacred rights of hospitality," returned the poet. "My lord, I am."

"You are very young," the knight continued.

"I should never have been so old," replied Villon, showing his fingers. "If I had not helped myself with these ten talents. They have been my nursing mothers and my nursing fathers."

"You may still repeat and change."

"I repeat daily," said the poet. "There are few people more given to repentance than poor Francis. As for change, let somebody change my circumstances. A man must continue to eat, if it were only that he may continue to repent."

"The chance must begin in the heart," returned the old man solemnly. "My dear lord," answered Villon, "do you really fancy that I steal for pleasure? I hate stealing like any other piece of work or of danger. My teeth chatter when I see a gallows. But I must eat. I must drink. I must mix in society of some sort. What the devil! Man is not a solitary animal—cul Deus facit humanum. Make me king's panther, make me abbot of St. Denis, make me bailli of the Patatrac, and then I shall be changed indeed. But as long as you leave me the poor scholar Francis Villon, without a farthing, why, of course, I remain the same."

"The grace of God is all-powerful," said the old man, looking at Villon. "It has made you lord of Brissetout and bailli of the Patatrac. It has given me nothing but the quick wits under my hat and these ten toes upon my hands. May I help myself to wine? I thank you respectfully. By God's grace, you have a very good wine."

Dinner Stories

Two sisters while visiting in Ireland in Victoria's time, got into conversation one day with a tenant of their hostess. One of the girls, who is quite stout, asked the old woman

if she would have known them for sisters. "Well," was the answer, "ye look alike, but yer sister's slender, while you, miss—well, you favor the quane."

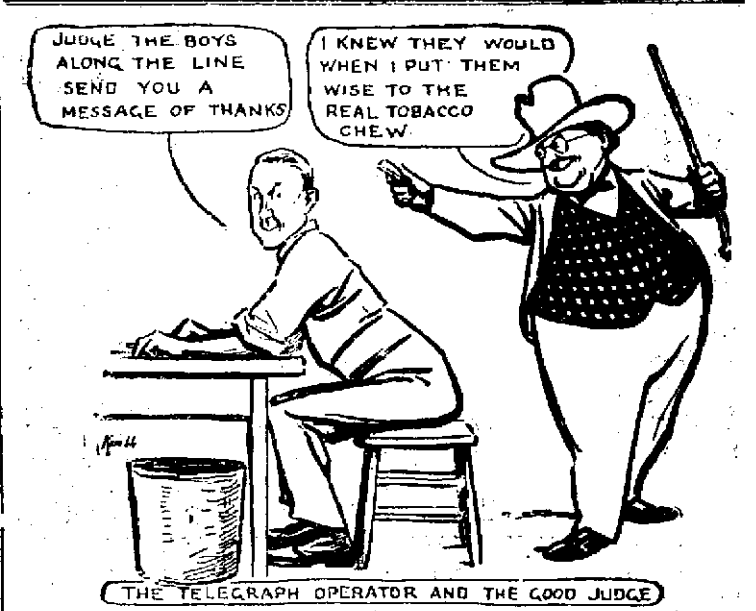

They were speaking of lightning calculators. The other evening Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts recalled an incident that transpired at a public school.

One day a teacher in the school was instructing a class of youngsters in arithmetic, and after asking questions all along the line, she finally came to Willie Jones.

"Willie," said she, "if your father had $1 and your mother asked him for 25 cents, how much would he have left?"

"One dollar!" came Willie's answer with almost startling promptness. "I am surprised at you, Willie," said the teacher, severely, "you evidently do not know your arithmetic."

"May not know my 'rithmetic," admitted Willie, "but ye can just bet a hundred I know the old man."

THE TELEGRAPH OPERATOR AND THE GOOD JUDD

ALL around you men are talking about "Right-Cut"

You yourself are probably telling your friends it's the Real Tobacco Chew. No "Right-Cut" user wants to see his friends go without it.

Made of pure, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough. You get all the good of the rich, sappy tobacco!

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS

ALBERT PAYSON TERNUM

MASSASOIT.

It was the dead of winter in 1621. The handful of hardy English "pilgrims" who had landed a few months earlier at Plymouth Rock were struggling to keep body and soul together in the bleak Massachusetts climate. Their provisions were scanty, their dwellings rude and insufficient. Their prospects of maintaining life on that desolate, cold coast seemed worse than doubtful. Had the bravest, most hopeful of them all been told that the watched little colony would grow and flourish until it should one day become the bulwark of American liberty—he would have laughed the idea to scorn. Or, rather—as the pilgrim fathers frowned upon such idle joys as laughter—he would more probably have had the rash prophet clapped into the stocks.

"Welcome, Englishmen!"

The pilgrims' worst fears were of an Indian raid. The enmity of the savages, they knew, would be the foremost barrier in the way of their colony's prosperity and permanent life. So, when, one day, during that first bitter winter, an Indian advanced from the forest toward a group of busy Plymouth settlers, they grasped their muskets in alarm. Their fear changed to amazement as the savage halted and called to them in perfect English: "Welcome, Englishmen!"

The native, Samoset by name, had picked up the words from certain Pequot fishermen. He went on to say that he was a messenger from the great Indian king, Massasoit, ruler of the confederacy of Wampanoag tribes, and that he brought from his royal master assurances of peace and friendship.

A short time afterward—March 15, 1621—Massasoit himself with 60 warriors drew near to the colony. The king was ready to greet the white men as friends, but was equally ready, in case of hostile demonstrations on their part, to destroy them. Thus, though he bore food and furs with him, yet he and his braves were armed and in full warpaint. Edward Winslow, a delegate from the pilgrims, went forward to meet Massasoit. A little behind Winslow followed Capt. Miles Standish with a handful of musketeers, ready to fire into the clump of Indians at the first sign of treachery. Winslow laid presents before the royal visitor, then consented to remain behind as hostage for Massasoit's safety while the savage king, with 20 of his men, went with Standish to a hut where Governor Carver of the colony waited to receive him.

There a solemn peace treaty between Massasoit and the colonists was drawn up and sworn to. This was the first diplomatic document recorded in New England. Nor did the king ever break his word. He made his subjects keep peace with the English, and helped them with generous gifts of corn and meat. Indeed, had his attitude toward the pilgrims been different the colony might well have perished. As it was, the rigors of climate and hunger were not aggravated in those early years by fear of Indian invasion.

Massasoit was born in Massachusetts about 1580. He was hereditary king of the Wampanoags and ruled a territory that stretched from Cape Cod to Narragansett Bay. His people had numbered about 30,000. But shortly before the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth in 1620 a terrible epidemic (supposed to have been yellow fever) swept the land, leaving barely 300 of the 30,000 Indians alive. A colonial writer described Massasoit as "a portly man in his best years, grave of countenance and spare of speech." His kindness to the English settlers was due to natural goodness of heart and not to fear. America owes him a heavy debt, a debt which the early New Englanders met by tricking the friendly, unsuspecting king and his people out of thousands of square miles of land.

Twice Saves Colony.

In the summer of 1621 an embassy from the pilgrims visited Massasoit near Narragansett Bay. He received them in a scarlet hunting coat and a huge gilt chain—part of the presents Carver had sent him—and renewed his pledges of friendship. Again in 1623, when Massasoit lay ill, Winslow visited him and tried to cure him by means of such simple remedies as he knew. Out of gratitude the king told Winslow of a plot another tribe of Indians had formed to massacre the settlers. By this timely warning he again saved the colony. In 1634 when Roger Williams fled from Puritan persecution in Massachusetts the king received him as an honored guest and for weeks gave the great philanthropist shelter and refuge.

Massasoit died in 1660. And with his death fled the last hope of peace between Indians and Massachusetts colonists. His son, King Philip (whose career has been described in an earlier article), became the settlers' deadly foe. The bonds of peace sealed by Massasoit and the pilgrims were ripped asunder in a series of wars that ended only when the Indian power in New England was utterly crushed.

Main Thing.

At the end of a somewhat sweeping peroration the young lady said: "And now, Mrs. Smith, would you not like to have a vote and exercise the privilege of citizenship?" To which, says the Glasgow News, the lady of the scrubbing brush made a typically feminine reply. "I don't know, miss," she said, agitatedly; "what would it cost?"

Make Walls and Ceiling of BESTWALL Instead of Plaster

The owner likes Bestwall better because it protects his house from fire—keeps out cold, heat and dampness—is quickly applied—takes any kind of decoration without panels—eliminates muss and damage of plaster and possibility of its cracking, breaking, etc.—and finally, Bestwall wears as long as the house.

The contractor and carpenter prefer Bestwall because it is easier, quicker and cheaper to apply than lath and plaster. Carpenters lose no time waiting for plasterers to finish inside—job is finished when expected—no expense for a man to clean up after plasterers.

The real estate man insists on Bestwall because it improves the interior appearance of the house, minimizes repair expense, makes houses easier to sell or rent and keep rented.

The architect specifies Bestwall, too, because it enables him to carry out his wishes and give his clients better service.

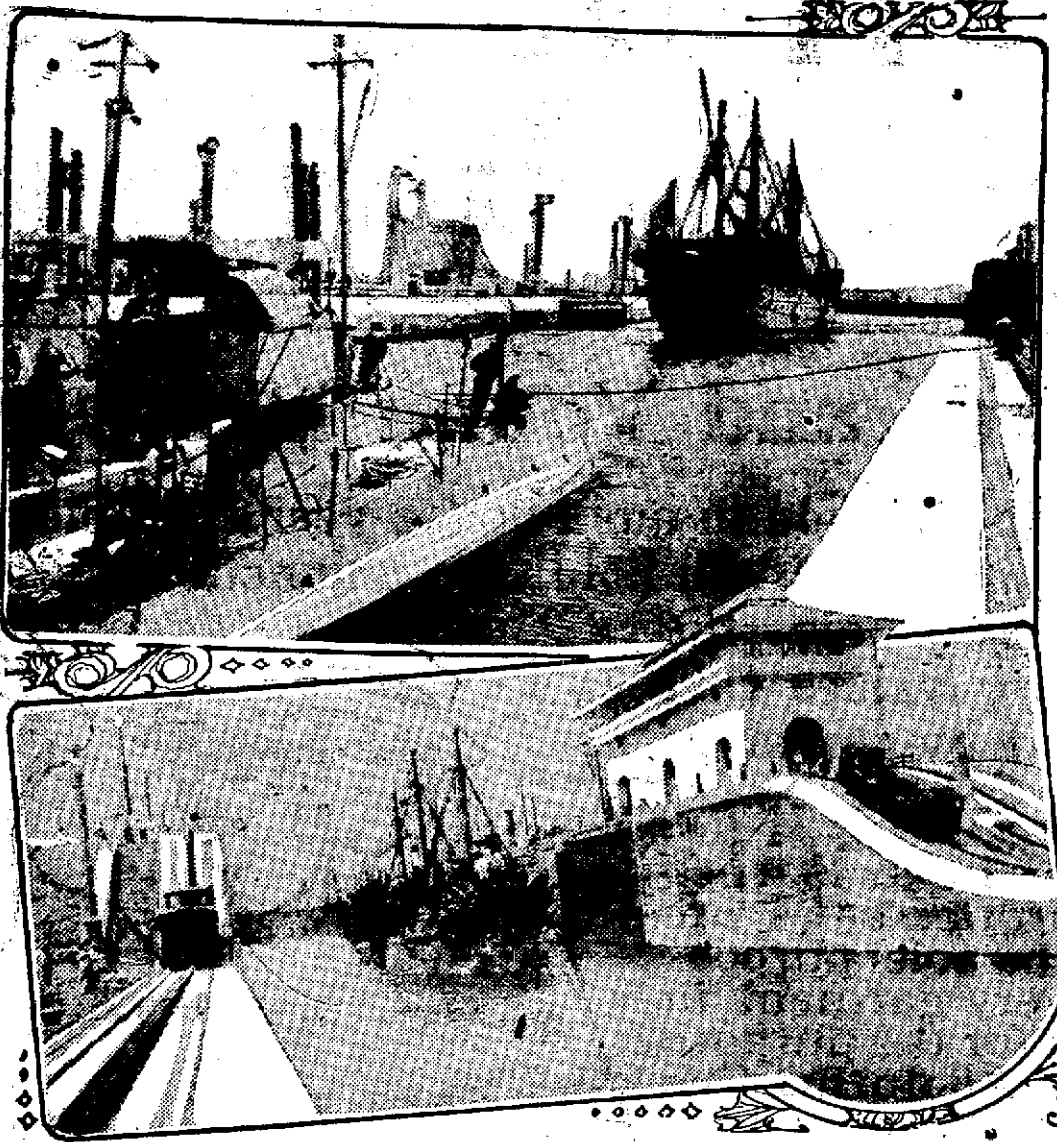

These dealers recommend Bestwall because they want to give customers greater value for their money. Ask any of them or the manufacturers for literature, sample and prices.

UNCLE SAM TESTS WORKING OF ELECTRIC TOWING LOCOMOTIVES IN PANAMA CANAL; BIG LINER PASSES THROUGH GATUN LOCKS

Top, the tender "Severn," followed by navy submarines, in lower east chamber of Gatun locks, waiting for the water to be lowered to sea level; bottom, towed by electrically-driven locomotives on lines suggesting switchbacks; the tender "Severn" entering the middle east chamber of the Gatun locks.

That great engineering feat, the Panama canal, showed yet another sign of coming to full fruition when a few days ago an ocean liner, the Allianca, made a successful passage of the Gatun locks. The trip was made a test of the working of the electric towing locomotives in handling a large vessel. The operation passed off without any incident, the time required being about an hour and a half each way.

Judgment in Public Affairs.

Judgment is a possession of an enormous value to a nation, and in proportion as it contains men of judgment, in direct proportion will that nation prosper. What is it that I mean by judgment in public affairs? I mean the capacity for taking a large, calm, and unbiased view.—Lord Rosebery.

Selfishness.

Selfishness assumes many forms, and in every one of them may be found the desire to grasp some fancied means of happiness, even at the expense of others. Many things innocently pleasurable in themselves, when they come to us in a rightful and natural manner, turn into guilty and fraudulent possessions when sought and gained through the losses or pain of others.

Muskin on Traveling.

To any person who has all his senses about him, a quiet walk, over not more than ten or twelve miles of road a day, is the most amusing of all traveling; and all traveling becomes dull in exact proportion to its rapidity. Going by railroad I do not consider as traveling at all; it is merely "being sent" to a place, and very little different from becoming a parcel.—Ruskin.

WAY OF DOCTORING MASONRY

Germans Adopt Method That Entirely Obviates Necessity of Tearing Down Cracked Walls.

Ingenious Germans of Hamburg recently have adopted a method of doctoring masonry that entirely obviates the necessity of tearing down cracked and decaying walls.

In the city of Hamburg two crumbling railway bridges were used in the experiments. They were 51 feet in the arch spans, and cracks had appeared everywhere, so that the structures barely hung together. Holes were bored through the masonry to get to the depths of the cracks and a watery cement mortar was pumped in under a pressure of five atmospheres until all the crevices were filled. When this had hardened it was found that the bridges were as firm under all tests as new masonry, and were not even disfigured by the process.

To the antiquary as well as the practical engineer, this should appear as a boon, for ancient stone structures with historical associations, which become dangerously weak can be given a renewed youth without rebuilding or destroying any of the marks of venerable age. In this country more bridges and other stone structures are torn away because they no longer accommodate their needs, than because they are outworn, but there may come a time in America when we shall have occasion to do a little patching, and the German methods will serve excellently.

PUTTY KNIFE IS IMPROVED

Scraper Attachment Leaves Blade Free for Spreading—Advantage Over Old Style.

Painters and glaziers will find a great convenience in the improved putty knife designed by a New York man. The invention is a small one.

Improved Putty Knife.

and the need it fills could scarcely be called a crying one, but it has distinct advantages over the old-style knife. The new knife has a slot running across it near the end and in the slot a scraper blade is pivoted on a hinge. When not in use the scraper lies flat along the knife blade, but it can be opened to abut the blade at right angles. The putty is placed on the end of the knife and, with the thumb pressed against it, is laid along the edge of a window frame, or wherever it is to go, as in the old method. In scraping off the superfluous putty, however, it is not necessary to remove that from the knife blade and use the edge of this blade, as was formerly the case. The scraper attachment on the new type does this work even more effectively and the end of the knife is kept clean.

Age of Fish.

Until within recent years there had been ascertained no trustworthy way of finding out the age of fish. It has been shown that mere size does not indicate the age. Reibisch, Heineke and others have discovered that many of the bones, scales and otoliths of fishes have annual age rings, resembling those in tree trunks.
